PRICES OF DRY GOODS. A Talk on the Effect of the McKinley Bul

A good deal has been said by the local Democratic organ and local Democratic orators, in unison with those elsewhere, all along the line, due to the operations of the McKinley bill. True, these allest gations have been as positive and reckless in expart to needles and other things now for the first time in years on the free list, as anything else, but the wildest breaks of all are adhered to just as firmly as those which might seem plausible to one not well informed.

Dry goods of all kinds have been referred to as among those articles increasing price by the McKinley bill. An INTELLIGENCER reporter the other day had a talk with Mr. Peter Rhodes on that subject. Mr. Rhodes has been in the dry goods business some time, and has a pretty thorough knowledge of the retail trade. He said he did not know of a domestic fabrie that had gone up in price, or was liable to. He thought, on the centrary, that the effect would be the same as the effect of protection usually is—it will stimulate the manufacture in America of goods not before made here, and home competition will in the long run cut prices down.

"What percentage of your stock do you suppose is foreign goods?"

"What percentage of your stock do you suppose is foreign goods?"
"I believe we do not sell one-tenth as much imported stuff as domestic."
"Is the American stuff as good?"
"In every respect. In many lines it is better. We can now make as good silks as anybody, and the best ribbons made anywhere are produced in America under protection."
Mr. Rhodes showed the reporter two pieces of costly yes grain silk, one pieces of costly gros grain silk, one foreign and the other American. The reporter thought the American as good if not better, and Mr. Rhodes said his judgment was correct. Then he showed an article in the Dry Goods Economist, quoting English authority for the statement that the finest broadcloth shown at the London World's Fair of 1851, the piece that took first premium, was made lowing suggestions were adopted in order:

1. That our ministers instruct their churches more fally and faithfully upon the needs of this great work.

2. That they give careful attention to the recommendation of the last General Assembly concerning subscriptions and pledges and helps toward enlarged contributions.

3. That the churches that have not taken a special collection for the debt be urged to do so at once.

4. That our full quota of the $50,000 to be collected from Sabbath schools be raised.

5. That our people be urged to contribute as far as possible through our many interesting Scripture sites; among them, the spot where David slew Goliath, and the village where, for revive and extend the system of simultaneous meetings or, some other plan of awakening general popular interest in a few touching phrases, the Bishop portaneous meetings or, some other plan of was kept in the house of Abinadab. In a few touching phrases, the Bishop portrayed his own feelings, when at 2:45 p. un., April 1, he entered Jerusalem. In spite of a derencing rain, which drove a large party of American tourists from their tents, he at once made his way to the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, within which are located the most sacred of all holy shrines, Calvary and the Savior's Tomb.

He dwelt for some time on these holy places, drawing a picture of their relations.

places, drawing a picture of their rela-tive positions, and giving to his hearers tive positions, and giving to his hearers a panoramic view of the whole. Turning from his notes, he said he had not intended to furnish any arguments in support of the identity of this spot with the Calvary of the Bible, but that he could not suffer to pass unnoticed Dr. Talmage's sweeping assertion that all modern travelers deny this identity and locate Calvary outside the present walls of Jerusalem. The place of the Saviour's Crucilizion, he said, was well known to the christians of l'alestine before the Crucilizion, he said, was well known to the christians of Palestine before the visit of the Empress, St. Helena, in the year 326; and it would have been strange indeed, if this were not the case. He then quoted Dean Stanley to show that the spot recognized and venerated from time immemorial must have been outside the city walls in former times. Resuming the thread of his lecture, the Bishop gave a most interesting account of the many other sacred places in and around Jerusslem, just as he visited them day after day during his week's stay in that city. In the city, he described more or less at length, the upper chamber where Christ instituted the Eucharist; the home of Caiphas; the pretorium and place of scourging; the house of Pilate; the l'an Dolorosa over which Christ carried His cross to Calvary, and the scenes which occurred on that sorrowful journey. Outside the city, he located and described the valley of Kedron, the garden of Gethsemene, the spot of Christ's bitter agony, the Mount of Clives, and the various Bible sites down Kedron and up the valley of Hinnom, alluding also to the crowds of unfortunate levers who line all the roads. Hinnom, alluding also to the crowds of Hinnom, alluding also to the crowds of unfortunate lepers who line all the roads leading into Jerusalem. He also gave an account of his visit to Bethlehem and of the several interesting localities lying between Bethlehem and Jerusalem.

The close attention given throughout by the large and appreciative audience evidenced the pleagure they enjoyed in listening to the Bishop's description of Jerusalem during Holy Week. No doubt many of those who heard him last evening will be all the more anxious to listen to his "Glimpses of Egypt" at the same hour next Sunday in the church of the Immalculate Conception, in the Eighth ward.
